gown over pale pink silk and wearing a pink picture hat with graceful pink plumes, and Mrs. Marston Campbell was handsomely gowned in a white princess lace robe trimmed with pearls, and wearing a large black picture hat with sable plumes, Mrs. Clifford Kimball was modishly attired in lavender foulard, and Miss Kimball wore a frock of soft white silk. There were a great many other admirably attired ladies in the assembly.

The two most elaborate and beautiful dinners of the week were those given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dowsett and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Campbell who will together depart in the Korea for a three months trip to Europe.

Mrs. Dowsett's charm, her hospitality and her beautiful personality have won for her an enviable position in the social set of Honolulu, and her friends have been striving for supremacy in their occasions given for her.

Mrs. Campbell is also a most winsome and popular member of the smart set, and the functions given in her honor have been many.

The trip, with its ocean voyages across the Pacific and Atlantic, will insure the quiet and rest which is so sorely required by these two society matrons, after a perfect deluge of entertainment, and the strenuousness which it has entailed.

Mr. and Mrs. Dowsett and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell expect to return in the late fall.

The opening of the new University Club in Halealea lawn last evening with a dinner-dance was a very brilliant affair, all or a great part of society's elite being represented. The decorations of the dining room which is open on the hotel street side were carried out in bright lights, quantities of golden shower and purple asters to combine harmoniously with the color of the college pennants gracing the walls.

Kaai's orchestra furnished music during dinner and for the dancing which succeeded it.

Following are those who entertained and number of guests: C. H. Atherton, 8; Captain Low, U. S. M. C., 5; Capt. Chapman of Fort Shafter, 2; F. T. P. Waterhouse, 2; A. M. Nowell, 8; R. D. Mead, 8; C. H. Olson, 6; Dr. Hobdy, 6; Lieut. Turner, 2; C. F. Clemons, 5; Frank Thompson, 4; Judge Ballou, 6; Mr. Gilmore, 4; Mr. Atkinson, 2; Capt. Timberlake, 4; L. A. Thurston, 3; Mr. Haenke, and Mr. Richardson, 6; Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, 2; Mr. Watson, 4; Mr. Young, 2; Lieut. Bowen of Fort Shafter, 2; W. M. Graham, 4; Mr. Pond, 2; Lieut. Pardee of Fort Shafter, 4; Mr. Olsen, 6; Judge H. E. Cooper, 2; Mr. Prosser, 6; Dr. Hobdy, 6; Mr. Sherman, 7; Mr. Lowrey, 8; L. M. Whitehouse, 6; Dr. Moore, 4; R. S. Hosmer, 2; J. R. Judd, 6; Admiral C. P. Rees, 6.

Round a table adorned with American Beauty roses, Dr. and Mrs. James Judd entertained at a dinner for six at the University Club last evening. The place cards were in water colors, and old rose silk shaded candelabra enhanced the beauty of the silver and rock crystal appointments and the exquisitely beautiful gowns of the ladies.

The hostess, whose rare artistic sense is always well defined, looked marvelously pretty in an imported model of roseada chiffon over soft white satin, and wearing a very large black picture hat with flowing willow plumes.

Mrs. Gerrit Judd was handsomely gowned in cerise satin and also wearing a modish black chapeau.

Mrs. Walter Dillingham attracted a great deal of flattering attention wearing a Parisian evening robe of soft gray chiffon, and an imported chapeau of grey satin, bearing a bird of Paradise.

The guests at this charming dinner party were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham and Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Judd.

The "At Home" given by Mrs. Agnes H. B. Judd, at her luxurious home, "Rosenheim" in Nuuanu Valley from four to six o'clock on Monday afternoon, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Parmelee Judd was elaborate and beautiful in every detail, about five hundred invitations having been issued. During the hours of receiving, automobiles and carriages filed into the spacious grounds, whose occupants, beautifully and modishly gowned, were received upon entering by Mrs. James Judd and presented to the hostess and guests of honor, who stood in a bower of young bamboo, calla lilies and daisies. No end of elaborate planning and designing had been done, and in consequence the house was like a peep into a fairy book. Great tall vases of stately long-stemmed American Beauty roses graced every table and cabinet in the drawing room, while the library and halls and stairways were fringed with young bamboo and daisies. Pink carnations, asparagus fern and maiden hair were also used to advantage and in great profusion while the lanais were enclosed by a canopy and walls of golden shower and the cassia nedosa in pink and golden glory. Intermingling gracefully with these exquisite blooms were more sprays of willow and young bamboo and Jacqueminot, Marshal Neil and La France roses in bewildering profusion.

Receiving with the hostess were Mrs. James R. Judd, in an imported confection of reseda green over white satin, and elaborately trimmed in Alice blue, with an Alice blue picture hat to match with willow plumes; Mrs. Allan W. Judd, Mrs. Lawrence M. Judd and Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit P. Judd.

Light refreshments were served at small tables scattered about the lanai and dining room.

Those invited to this elaborate and beautiful reception were Mr. and Mrs. Hemenway, Miss Clara Hemenway, Mrs. Andrew Fuller, Mr. George Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Love, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Richards, Mrs. Parke, Miss Parke, Mrs. Walbridge, Mrs. Weaver, and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ben L. Frear, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron, Miss Constance Restarick, Mrs. Tucker, Miss Anna Tucker, Mrs. Mary Gunn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weight, Judge and Mrs. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. George Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Von Holt, Miss Mary Von Holt, Mrs. T. Coan and Miss Reynolds.

One of the most prominent tables last evening at the University Club was that at which Judge and Mrs. S. M. Ballou presided. La France roses and pale pink shaded candles formed a dainty setting for the hosts and their guests.

Judge Balkin holds the honored position of president of the University Club and the guests were Mrs. Francis R. Day, whose late husband enjoyed the distinction of being the first president of the club, Miss Jessica Irwin, Colonel Schuyler and his nephew, Mr. Schaefer of New York.

Mrs. Day was gowned in an imported frock of heavily embroidered pearl grey silk crepe, while Miss Irwin was beautiful in a confection of topaz satin elaborately adorned with embroidery and gold lace, and the hostess appeared to advantage in an imported creation of embroidered white mull over white satin and a chandelier pink chapeau bearing masses of self colored roses.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Misses Lillian and Grace Robertson, two very popular girls of the younger set, entertained at a delightful tea, whither several of their most intimate friends were bidden. The home of the two charming young hostesses on Bingham street was hospitably thrown open to receive the guests, and merry groups in motors arrived at an early hour to take advantage of the lavish hospitality which always is waiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Robertson.

The guests, after being warmly received and greeted, gathered in congenial groups about the drawing room which was made fragrant by great clusters of pale pink Marshal Neil roses in Japanese brass bowls and jardinières, and rock crystal tall stemmed vases, and these, nestling into a background of graceful palms, formed a harmonious ensemble for the daintily gowned girls gathered in their midst.

The younger members of the party chatted and served quite informally and many dainty pretty foibles were revealed to admiring eyes, some of which were mischievously turned in the direction of the library, where Miss Ada Rhodes sat playing bridge, with Mrs. James Dougherty, Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Fred Damon.

Delicious and original refreshments were served later, consisting of salad, sandwiches, tutti frutti ice cream, banana short cake and pineapple punch.

Those present at this delightful afternoon were Miss Beatrice Campbell, who looked very attractive in a tailored frock of Alice blue rajah silk and wearing a large black velvet picture hat with white willow plumes; Miss Ethel Whiting, in a dainty white lingerie frock with a large black hat with white plumes; Miss Nadine Center, in an embroidered lavender frock; Miss Myrtle Schuman, who was gowned in a blue lingerie; Mrs. Fred Damon, in a pink lingerie afternoon gown with a large picture hat bearing masses of sweet peas; Miss Marguerite Creighton, who wore a severe gown or pongee; Miss Ada Rhodes, looking as usual daintily pretty in pale blue with a large white picture hat; Mrs. Dougherty, very attractive in white lingerie, heavily embroidered, and Miss Lydia McStocker, who was very lovely in a pale pink silk.

The hostesses were very prettily attired, Miss Lillian Robertson wearing a confection of Alice blue Japanese crepe, elaborately embroidered and trimmed with baby Irish lace, while her sister, Miss Grace Robertson, was attired in a dainty New York afternoon frock of white dimity, trimmed in a profusion of fine laces and applique.

Dr. and Mrs. James Judd entertained at a handsome dinner for eight at their home on Prospect street on Monday evening. American Beauty roses in profusion formed an attractive centerpiece, while green shaded candelabra completed the appointments. After dinner, music filled the evening.

Sam McKeague of Honolulu arrived at the Turpin yesterday, accompanied by Mrs. McKeague.—S. F. Chronicle.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kennedy entertained on Wednesday evening at a very informal and delightful supper at their mansion on Victoria street, in honor of Allen Lowrey and their son Stanley Kennedy, who will return to college in the next September.

Red and white had been selected as the color scheme, those being the school colors of the complimented guests, and at seven o'clock the assembled guests, numbering twenty in all, sat down round a table banked with scarlet and white carnations as a centerpiece with clipper blossoms of these and maidenhair fern gracing the cloth.

The place cards represented scenes in water colors, and after supper, which in reality was a twelve course dinner, the guests repaired to the drawing room, where music filled the remaining hours.

Those present on this occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Castle, Miss Helen North, Miss Muriel Howatt, Miss Ronhilde White, Miss Sarah Lucas, Miss Hilda White, Miss Nott, Miss Jessica Irwin, Miss Irene Fisher, Miss Jessie Kennedy, Messrs. Stanley Kennedy, Allen Lowrey, George Renton, Jr., Bruce Cartwright Jr., Herbert Dowsett, Hedemann (2), Lowrey (2), and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kennedy.

Miss Marguerite Creighton entertained a few friends informally at a tea yesterday afternoon from four to six at home on Keeaumoku street.

Mrs. Charles F. Chillingworth, entertained at a very delightful card party yesterday afternoon in honor of Princess Kawanakoa.

The house was beautifully decorated with palms, maidenhair and Paul Veron roses in tall vases, making an artistic ensemble.

The first prize at bridge, a very handsome rock crystal bon bon dish was awarded to Princess Kawanakoa, while the consolation prize fell into the ownership of Mrs. Arthur Davidson—a very beautiful silver photograph frame.

During the afternoon delicious refreshments of salad, sandwiches, cakes and punch were served and those present at this very charming afternoon were: Princess Kawanakoa, who looked exceedingly handsome in a gown of cream lace and over pale pink silk, wearing a picture hat lined with cerise, and bearing round the crown long gray plumes and cerise roses.

Princess Kalaniana'ole, regal in cream lace over white satin and a white picture hat lined with black satin from which fell long white willow plumes.

Besides these there were present, Mrs. Harry Murray, Mrs. Marston Campbell, Mrs. Geo. Curtis, Mrs. Wm. Campbell, Miss Irene Dickson, Miss Ada Rhodes, Mrs. Fred Hans, Mrs. Gussie Schmidt, Mrs. Fred Damon, Mrs. Arthur Davidson, Mrs. A. P. Taylor, Miss Margaret McIntyre, Mrs. Walter Macfarlane, Mrs. Robt. Shingle, Mrs. C. Wideman, Mrs. Chas. Falke and Miss Beatrice Campbell.

Princess Kalaniana'ole entertained at a very elaborate luncheon on Thursday at her beautiful Walkiki estate, Pualelani, in honor of and as a farewell to Princess Kawanakoa.

The dining hall of the late Queen Dowager was the scene of gaiety the tables being placed conventionally about an embankment of golden corymbis blooms and maidenhair fern. To each corner of the table streamers of yellow tulle asparagus fern fell gracefully, the same being draped about the table.

The poi luncheon with all its delicacies and unique setting and served in Koa wood calabashes and plates of highly polished tortoise shell, was most attractive and takes one of the foremost places in the society events of the past week.

After luncheon music was enjoyed from such artists as Miss Ada Rhodes, Mrs. Walter Macfarlane and Mdlle. Dreyfus of Paris who proved herself quite worthy of the praise which had preceded her.

The hostess wore a costly robe of maltese lace over old rose satin and Princess Kawanakoa looked as usual very striking in a confection of white silk with a tunic of white point d'esprit and wearing a large modish picture hat bearing masses of pale pink roses.

Those present at this delightful affair were Mrs. Marx, wife of Capt. Marx, U. S. M. C., Mdlle. Dreyfus of Paris, Miss McCarthy, Mrs. C. O. Berger, Miss Ada Rhodes, Mrs. Walter Macfarlane, Mrs. Charles Chillingworth, Mrs. Geo. Smithies, Miss Mary Low, Mrs. Carl Wideman, Mrs. A. P. Taylor, Mrs. Geo. Herbert and Miss Maggie McIntyre.

Miss Lydia McStocker entertained a few friends quite informally at a tea on Monday afternoon from 4 to 6.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Richardson entertained at what undoubtedly holds rank as the most expensively dainty and elaborate dinner of the season in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dowsett and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Campbell.

The house was brilliantly lighted, and soft silk shades shed a soft glow over the palms and statuary of the drawing and music rooms and library.

The dining salon—for surely only such could hold such a stirring scene of beauty—was amazingly pretty, the oblong table set beneath an artistic chandelier softly shaded in plug silk rose designed shades, being aglitter with appointments which caused even the practical men among the guests to stop and admire. In the center of this oblong table, amid a profusion of cut glass and silver and snowy linen, pale pink duchess roses formed a centerpiece in a heaping mass within a low expanding bowl of rock crystal, in pond effect, within a rustic railing of sparkling transparent crystal bars which extended completely around the table and whose posts were represented by columns each holding a single duchess rosebud and spray of the most delicate and minute lace maidenhair fern.

The place cards were also very novel for Honolulu, being semi-garlands, the name cards falling from the center and fastened by invisible and mysterious means to the wine glass, giving the effect of suspension in midair.

Not the least effective in this beauty of arrangements about the table were the gowns worn by the ladies who sat about it; each one apparently as exquisite if not more beautiful than his neighbor.

Mrs. Dowsett, one of the honored guests for whom the dinner was given was a perfect picture in an imported creation of grey in one of the new tones, decollete, en train, and with motifs of steel beads ingeniously worked in the bodice. The neck was cut low and round and was bordered round the shoulder, and side front with a remarkably striking corsage bouquet of miniature deep scarlet hibiscus, which was not only unique but extremely becoming to this charming woman's beauty, and the jewels Mrs. Dowsett wore with this beautiful gown were emeralds and diamonds.

Mrs. A. J. Campbell, another guest of honor, looked very lovely in a robe of heavy white lace, elaborately trimmed in gold lace, and wearing round her throat a necklace of diamonds.

Mrs. Richardson, the hostess, was attired in black chiffon and wearing a display of jet jewels.

Mrs. E. Faxon Bishop wore a Parisienne robe of applique lace, with a complement of rubies and diamonds for jewels, a necklace of the same rare gems gracing her throat.

Mrs. Lanz was attractively robed in dove colored grey, Greek passamentine with green motifs. With this lovely costume no jewels were worn but sprays of snow orchids, made an artistic substitute.

Mrs. Mary Gunn was attired in a white Irish lace frock over soft white satin with a single red rose in her hair, while Mrs. Klebahn in a black chantilly lace robe and passamentine in Egyptian design looked very handsome.

The guests at this beautiful dinner were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dowsett, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Klebahn, Mrs. E. Faxon Bishop, Mrs. Mary Gunn, Mr. and Mrs. Lanz, Mr. H. M. Whitney and Dr. Hojins.

From the Southland comes word of the thrilling experience encountered yesterday afternoon by Frederick W. McNear and Charles Templeton Crocker. Motoring along the beach they ventured too near the water's edge and became very near being engulfed in quicksand before they realized their danger. They were only saved by jumping from the car and making a run for high ground.—S. F. Bulletin.

Captain James Gilmore of the Maryland, who has done much entertaining at the Mare Island yard since his ship has been there for repairs this summer, was a recent dinner host, entertaining Rear-Admiral Edward B. Barry, Colonel and Mrs. Randolph Dickens, Miss Virginia Dickens, Paymaster and Mrs. Edmund B. Bonaffon, Miss Nina Flow and Ensign and Mrs. Croffe.—S. F. Bulletin.

Among other late arrivals at Tahoe Tavern are Captain and Mrs. William Matson, Miss Lurline Matson, Miss Wilhelmina Tenney of Honolulu and Miss Zabrinsky of New York.—S. F. Bulletin.
